

Professor Roberto Della Loggia

graduated in Chemistry at the University of Trieste and thereafter joined the Institute of Pharmacology and Pharmacognosy at the same university as an assistant professor. He continued his career at the Faculty of Pharmacy, eventually becoming a full professor. He taught Plant Biology, Pharmacology, Pharmacognosy, and Phytotherapy, and served as Dean of the Faculty of Pharmacy for several years. His scientific work focuses on the pharmacological activities of natural products, with particular reference to their anti-inflammatory effects. He is the author of over a hundred articles in international scientific journals. After retiring, he continued teaching at Master's programs at various Italian universities and as a popularizer of phytotherapy. He is currently President of the Italian Society of Phytotherapy and a Senior Scholar at the University of Trieste.
